New Innovations Updates

GME Evaluation Form - Display Modification

New Innovations believes you should have total control over your evaluation forms, so with their last update, released on Tuesday, April 18, the default Rating Scale values should no longer display on evaluation forms.

However, if you prefer to display numerical values for your evaluators, you can simply edit your Rating Scale labels to include them, even if the form is currently in use.

For users with active forms that only showed the values without labels, New Innovations modified the labels for you to include the numerical values automatically with the update.

This update also delivered some new functionality, including an option to display values in ascending or descending order, and the ability to use decimals for fractional values.
